Revisions to the Floodproof Construction Requirements Policy Approved:

The Board received a communication from the Public Works Projects Evaluation Committee stating they received a communication from Storm Sewer Utility Division Engineer Nathan Boerboom regarding proposed revisions and clarifications to the Floodproofing Policy that was adopted by the City Commission. They said since the implementation, staff has been working with developers and the Homebuilders Association to address areas requiring clarification. They said staff has identified a couple of areas of concern where the current language has led to the potential for homes to be built at less than the intended elevation. Another identified issue, they said, is related to non-primary slab on grade structures such as detached garages or sheds.

Storm Sewer Utility Division Engineer Nathan Boerboom said back in December Engineering came to the Commission with a revision to the floodproofing construction policy that the City has in place. He said the policy helps guide elevation requirements as well as construction procedures for floodproofing basements. He said the revisions were part of the basement exception process that the City went through as a requirement of FEMA for the map update that became effective in January. Since those changes have been in place, he said, Engineering has started to incorporate them into the design of new residential structures. He said the Home Builders Association (HBA) came to Engineering seeking clarification on some items. He said with the changes that were made, if a new builder were to come to town they would easily be able to see what the City of Fargo's requirements are.

In response to a question from Commissioner Williams as to whether or not the City can anticipate another elevation increase from FEMA, City Engineer April Walker said a few weeks ago Senator John Hoeven was here with FEMA staff and at that time there were discussions about the City's current floodplain and what FEMA see's happening going forward. She said FEMA indicated that it is mandatory for them to look at the City of Fargo again in 5 years, so within 5 years FEMA will come back and decide whether or not the City's elevation level is appropriate and whether or not the floodplain has changed or needs to change. She said if funding is available, the process of remapping could move very quickly because the City has already created the model that is needed as well as the hydrology and hydraulics associated with the future map change.

In response to a question from Commissioner Williams regarding sections of the City being removed from the flood insurance risk as the projects are completed, Ms. Walker stated that is the goal; however, the only project that has been submitted to FEMA for removal is the Ridgewood project. She said that project is still under review by FEMA and the City is hopeful to get that resolved soon and move forward.

Commissioner Piepkorn moved the revisions to the Floodproof Construction Requirements Policy be approved as presented.

Discussion Regarding the FM Flood Risk Mitigation District No. 1:

Commissioner Williams said he did not feel right about this vote and feels that there should be some way that the citizens have a larger bearing on the outcome of the vote.

Chairman of the Cass County Joint Water Resource District (CCJWRD) Mark Brodshaug said the Diversion Authority assigned the task of developing a special assessment district to CCJWRD in December of 2012. He said the CCJWRD has the ability under the North Dakota Century Code to administer an assessment district throughout the benefitted area in North Dakota. He said the sales tax money will come in over a long period of time so there is a need to borrow money against the sales tax revenue in order to build the project as quick as possible to get the benefits accruing to the community as soon as possible. He said construction costs will outpace the sales tax revenues and sales tax financing will cost more than the special assessment alternative. He said the assessment district will provide better borrowing terms like a lower interest rate and lower coverage requirements.

AE2S Public Affairs Strategist Rocky Schneider said the water resource districts in North Dakota are guided under a different section of law than cities when it comes to the creation of assessment districts. Resource districts require a vote, he said, which are equal to the amount of liability to the residents' property. He said property owners are being asked to co-sign a loan with the government to get better terms with the sales tax revenue making the loan payments.

Finance Director Kent Costin said he was asked to touch base with the City's financial advisors and they ran some scenario's to look at the savings difference and the bottom line is that this is a huge savings for the City. He said $100 million dollars would be saved over the life of the bond issue and that is an efficient means for financing.

Board of Director's President for the Home Builders Association (HBA) Clay Dietrich said HBA has been involved with the flood fight since the beginning. He said when this question came up the HBA looked at this to determine if it was something to support in the least expensive way possible. Fargo is the only city that is down in growth, he said, and the HBA feels that it is due to the uncertainty of the flooding issues in the city. He said HBA supports this because they believe this is the least expensive way to do this.

Fargo Moorhead Association of Realtor's Representative Kevin Fisher said one thing that concerns the association is that this vote has been passed by the Commission and if it is now changed he feels many people would have voted or would have voted differently had they known the situation. He said he is also very concerned with the possibility of FEMA coming back in five years to change the mapping again and what effect that will have on the housing market in Fargo. He said he wonders if this does not pass, what impression this will give to the state and federal agencies.

Commissioner Williams moved to assume the FM Flood Risk Management District No. 1, if successful and implemented, the City of Fargo Flood Sales Tax Revenue Fargo Home Rule Charter Article 3T be fully expended towards payment of FM Diversion Project construction costs including the payment of debt service before any assessment is ever certified for collection.
