Limited Joint Powers Agreement for the Metro Flood Diversion Project Approved:

City Attorney Erik Johnson said the Limited Joint Powers Agreement is intended to govern the design process and related elements from now until September or October of 2012 and will also authorize the creation of the Diversion Authority. This week during a meeting with the Legal Subcommittee, he said, the group was able to discuss some of the issues that were brought up during the recent Metro Flood Study Work Group meeting and proposed ways of resolving some of these issues. He said one issue is whether this revised JPA would be acceptable basically allowing the Minnesota share to be advanced by the North Dakota entities admittedly taking the risk that if the project does not happen or something stalls the project, there would be no legal obligation on the part of Minnesota. The other issue, he said, is of time value and with North Dakota entities advancing the funds for a couple of years, if there should be some sort of interest payment. The discussion was that rather than taking an interest payment, North Dakota would take the lead on advancing the funds now, he said, and later on when there are construction costs Minnesota could take the lead on, advancing the funds with things being equaled out in that manner. He stated Minnesota members felt there was a problem with having the authority to promise to pay interest without the State Legislature's authority. This draft, he said, basically acknowledges there is a time value issue that needs to be resolved by the Metro Flood Diversion Authority and its members to be worked out in the future. The third issue has to do with voting, he said, as the draft reads there would be a nine member board, two members being from Minnesota requiring at least one vote being in favor and with bigger issues of the project a super majority vote would be required. After quite a bit of discussion, he said, no changes were made to the draft in regards to the voting issue.

Commissioner Mahoney moved the Limited Joint Powers Agreement for the Metro Flood Diversion Project be approved.

Once the report is completed, he said, the City can proceed to the next steps of the project. He said there have been a lot of alternatives looked over in the past couple of years and he wants to make sure that everything is in order.

Retention of a Lobbyist for the Metro Flood Diversion Project Approved: Staff Directed to Sign the Self Certification Documents for the Metro Flood Diversion Project:

City Administrator Pat Zavoral said he had a conference call this morning with a staff person from the Podesta Group. He said the Podesta Group is suggesting that if something is not in place by September 1st it may be very difficult to get the funding for the proposed diversion project in the President's 2013 budget. He said the idea is to hire the lobbyist at least thru December of 2011 to see if the project will make it into the President's budget.
