

A community garden is a plot of land gardened by people in the community. The land can be owned publicly or privately and can be gardened by either the owners of the land, the people that join the garden, or both. True community gardens are open to everyone and supply an area to grow fruits and vegetables. The garden is divided into plots which can be gardened by individuals or groups. Whether or not there is a cost associated with claiming a plot is up to the owner(s) of the land and/or the organization managing the garden.

No individual plots. This is a community garden where all work together in the garden then share the harvest or use harvest for classes at the garden. In May and June, meetings are weekly on Tuesdays at 6:00 p.m. and biweekly in the summer and fall. Each garden night there will be education on growing, harvesting, and different medicinal plants. There is more information available online with a $15 dollar subscription to Kanji Naturals. However, subscriptions are not necessary to participate in gardening.

Participation is modeled after the Growing Together gardens. We garden together once a week, typically Wednesdays from 6:00 – 8:00 p.m. Those who garden on a regular basis share in the harvest. We also donate shares to the Dorothy Day House and local food pantry. The garden doubled in size last year and raised beds were developed. We plan to put in a squash tunnel soon.

The Growing Together Gardens are open to all in the community and are always welcoming more gardeners. These are not individual plot gardens but are communal gardens where the volunteers work together at a specific time each week and equally share during the harvest. There is no cost to join. After volunteering for 20 hours, you are entitled to a full share of the harvest each time you join the garden. Garden involvement starts in May and runs through the first frost.

Growing Together Community Gardens has been instrumental in helping with community garden start-ups in the community and a tool kit is available online. Mentoring is also available at our Market Garden.
