City Administrator Pat Zavoral said staff has been working with the Corps of Engineers on specifications for removing the dikes. He said contractors have submitted bids to remove the dikes and work should start on the removal in the next couple of days.

City Engineer Mark Bittner stated the top priority for dike removal is the levees on the streets. He said there has been some talk with staff that some of the levees should remain. He said he has also been working with staff on what responsibility the City should take in restoring yards. In the past the City has not taken any responsibility, but with the amount of sand bags that were used during this flood season, he said that the City should take some responsibility in helping residents restore their homes. FEMA, he said, feels that it is a local responsibility, not theirs. Another issue is acquiring properties, he said and the City is going to have to look at using local funds to get these projects accomplished.

Commissioner Wimmer moved the recommendations presented by Mr. Bittner be accepted.
